

PARIS NAMES CIA MEN

THE French extreme-Left newspaper Liberation has carried out its threat to publish a list of CIA agents based in Paris.

Of the 32 names figuring in a first list in yesterday's paper, eight, Liberation claimed, were those of senior members of the agency's Paris-employed staff.

As well as Eugén F. Burgstaller, the station chief, they included Dominic Tacconelli, said to be the organisation's financial administrator responsible for assigning budgets for different missions.

The newspaper noted that several of the officers named had served in South American countries, and said this was "disquieting" in view of the status of Paris as a principal refuge for Latin-American refugees.

It could be assumed, it added, that these "experts" were assigned to operate in such refugee circles.

Under-staffed office

The remaining 24 names on the list are, it was indicated, lower-grade employees including secretaries, clerks and communications personnel.

Liberation remarks that the Paris communications office is apparently under-staffed, since only about half a dozen operators work in it "compared with about 15 in the same service of the London office."

The agents, says Liberation, are mainly assigned to three services in the American embassy: the regional report office, the office of special assistant, and the regional administrative support office. The offices, it says, are located on the third and fourth floors of the embassy's main building, in the Avenue Gabriel.
